ALMA MATER

Hail to thee, O Euclid High School,
To thy name all praise we sing.
Happy days of youthful pleasure,
Learning, living life so dear.
Our hearts fill with gratitude
For all that is to be . . .
Alma Mater, Euclid High School,
All our praise we bring to thee.

Where the blue of Erie's waters
Casts the sun's bright golden rays,
There all Euclid's sons and daughters
Sing the joys of student days.
If after days be dark and drear
And storms of life draw nigh,
The memories of our friendships here
Will lift our hearts to Euclid High.

Supplement 285

Each moment has been measured, preceded by an unrelenting past. With contentment the pattern of life is secured for the group and the lonely. Each person finds and builds his own pattern. For a pattern is singular, but the variations are unlimited. And each moment brings a newness.

The patterned sequence of study rarely yields to excitement or special rewards. The extraordinary is casually acknowledged with superior grades and honors. The true scholars are far and few, but each student having the opportunity to develop finds within the structured framework the freedom to grow.

When frivolous, the student can run exuberantly down the halls, play a large assortment of fun and games or spend an afternoon over a chocolate sundae in the E-room. Each event does not change a person, it merely adds to the pattern of life. The very, very popular combine with the not-so popular in all sorts of fantastic caprices. Away from the gregarious groups, two individuals are able to develop meaningful relationships, combining both gaiety and seriousness. The pattern of relationships enables one to distinguish between the faces in a crowd and one's true, honest friends.

23

The monotony of day after month stops just long enough to congratulate and recognize the few. Endowed with the spirit to seek excellence, the honored appear distant to the student sitting in the back of the congratulating throng. But even the unrecognized realize the meaning of honor.

The loud, crowded, insensitive noise breaks the stillness. And the pattern is broken. But after the burst of frenzy the quiet begins anew. The somber absence of voice, music and clattering din allows a precious moment for loneliness. Yet, the mind seeks to leave its solitary state. Released to revel in the racket of a crowd, one shouts until the noise reaches an unbearable height of expression, until it dies. And each moment retains the noisy quietness.

With all aspects of life conforming to a great pattern of oneness, the individual is hesitant over his present path, and his opportunities to vary from the expected. The infinite ways of expression permit each pattern to possess its own character and individuality. A new pattern waits to be found each moment.

For a specified number of periods each day, each student becomes a part of the academic world. The never-ceasing assignments and expected excellence weigh the student down. But for all of the lectures and sleepy study halls, the academic pattern consists of a student and his text, meeting alone, to learn.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Unceasing activity and planning comprise the routine followed at the Board of Education. Responsible for all aspects of school operation, and aided by employees, the five members of the Board seek to provide and maintain a high standard educational system for Euclid's young people. The individual student may become acquainted with the Board through a variety of means, one being attendance at a monthly meeting with a government class. Regardless of the extent of a student's knowledge of its functions, he recognizes the Board of Education as the basis for and ruling faction of Euclid's school system.

ADMINISTRATION

To many, a principal looms as an omniscient figure identified by voice via the public address system. For others, only the one or two administrators dealing directly with students are visited in the mysterious abode called the administration corridor. Aiding the head principal in the realm of school policies, the four assistant principals perform a range of tasks designed to keep Euclid running smoothly. Perhaps Dr. Bergem possesses the most familiar face. His signature appears on the bulletin that informs the student body of important events. And he frequently must stage and direct spirited pep rallies. Mr. Johns, in a newly attained position, guides the extra-curricular activities. Through numerous conferences, the senior who decides to attend college scours through catalogues and bulletins under the guidance of Mrs. Sheats. Although Mr. Lindsay may not be a familiar face to the student, he actively supervises the faculty and coordinates the curriculum. To meet the leadership challenge, Mr. Hunter sagaciously blends all of the individual units to maintain maximum efficiency.

DEANS AND COUNSELORS

Mentioning a Dean evokes various reactions from various people. The most common impression concerns a merciless individual who spends most of his time dealing with disciplinary problems. The first impression does not view the deans and counselors in the proper perspective. Aside from disciplinary matters, the counselors advise students on their vocational plans, and grades. Occasionally encountered when dealing with students are more serious problems including personal conflicts or family difficulties. In such cases the counselor becomes personally involved. During the three years, a few students develop lasting friendships with their counselors, either through periodic detentions or frequent appointments. The counselor and dean represent understanding adults concerned both with the academic and emotional needs of the student.

NON-TEACHING STAFF

To make a school run takes more than professionals. The roles most important to the physical operation of an academic institution are filled by secretaries, custodians, cafeteria staffers, cleaning and maintenance personnel. Rarely aware of the vital part these individuals perform, the student enjoys the result of their presence. Librarians aid the distraught student in need of research materials. Mr. Coatsworth, the school treasurer, withstands the guerilla tactics employed by bus pass purchasers weekly, as well as processes school funds. Too often the services are taken for granted. Without secretaries absences would go unrecorded, and appointments would be forgotten. The maintenance staff keeps repairing, cleaning, and protecting the physical plant. The non-teaching staff softens the academic atmosphere with practical services.

ENGLISH

The challenging world of dangling modifiers and comma splices exists for each student. However, the English course consists of more than learning the proper placement of a semi-colon. Team-teaching adds interest and variety to the program. Moving the team's planning hour to the period following the class permits the three teachers to have a better focus on the next day's program. It enables them to dwell on areas which appear obscure to the student and to spend less time on subjects which are grasped more quickly. All classes explore the world's literature. A student ponders the intricacies of a Shakespearean comedy, a Greek tragedy, or an American short story. Poetry leaves him with mixed emotions—appreciation for its beauty and bewilderment at its construction. Writing clinics aid students in mastering the art of written communication. Striving to present many areas and still maintain interest, the English Department successfully permits a student to earn required credit and to gain a measure of appreciation for his language.

SOCIAL STUDIES

History conjures up the image of slightly non-social scholars searching for original documents. The Social Studies Department uses history as its basis. However mandatory a state requirement demanding a knowledge of the U. S. tradition, the department strives to present history in a dynamic fashion. Rather than scholars, teachers develop interested citizens. The wide variety of courses treats both contemporary and ancient problems. The family is studied sociologically in Home and Family, while basic economic doctrines become a part of the student's background in Economics. The tight schedule of classes keeps the insight-inspiring teacher lively and witty. Interesting historical anecdotes reduce the misery of date memorization. Surviving early courses, the history buff is afforded the opportunity to explore, postulate hypotheses, write copious term papers, and appreciate the Western heritage. Both students and teachers expand their knowledge of current events through the reading of a weekly publication. The problem of combining the many facets of the social studies is partially solved by capable instructors. Still, American History remains an unyielding giant to many students. Lively interpretations coupled with sometimes riotous debates temper the giant.

MATHEMATICS

Abstract and concrete ideas merge in the Mathematics Department. Beginning algebra and technical math present basic ideas. The student progresses from beginning courses. Fundamentals expand to more abstract concepts in geometry, trigonometry and calculus. Strange symbols acquire meaning. Problems previously unconquerable suddenly have a solution. In computer math, a new course, students learn to use the computer as a technical tool much as they would a slide rule to aid in calculations. The varied program affords each student the opportunity to obtain skills which will prove beneficial in his chosen field.

SCIENCE

Science has a technical simplicity too often ignored or unappreciated. At the high school level very basic courses in biology, chemistry, natural resources and physics introduce natural science to the student. Every level of instruction strives to show just a bit of the wonder of the physical world. Lab experiments and ample texts supplement the classroom lecture. Write-ups appear as busy work to students but the teacher expects understanding of experiments; graphs and conclusions force the novice chemist to relate forty minutes of lab to concepts developed by giants in the field. Apart from the emotional, sociological, and practical programs of study, the third floor domain of science is impervious to traditional methods and courses. Dynamic changes continually alter the curricula. Following an inspired lecture the student feels slightly microscopic realizing the scientific world still remains to be conquered.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Enthusiasm and diligence, the canons ot the Foreign Language Department, constitute the creed of its teachers. Eager to apply such techniques as the lab, films and singing, the foreign language teacher becomes an exuberant symbol of his respective linguistical country. The results and effectiveness of these methods are illustrated by the thousands of lab slips turned in each year and attendance at department-sponsored foreign movies. But the teacher is not the only link to another cult of Western civilization. Written practice forms an integral part of advanced study. Literature reveals the nature of the country, while a worn dictionary becomes the student's irreplaceable friend and companion, although dialect and antiquity force one to utilize the technique of oral questioning during an unbelievably brief classroom time. Both the lab and language teacher offer the pupil his only chance at oral recitation which aids application and comprehension. From the boredom of repetition springs the ability to skillfully speak another tongue, the department's monumental gift.

HOME ARTS

Psychomecs sounds rather foreboding to a casual observer; a participant in this course of study seems to have to deal with ultra-sophisticated problems. Instead, it is another name for home arts. Apart from instructing tomorrow's homemakers in practical skills, the Home Arts Department attempts to instill in its students pride and responsibility. The girls become acquainted with the fundamental principles of planning, supplying and running an orderly household. Family living introduces the complexities of a family's organization. Clothing courses improve the technical and designing abilities. Theory becomes an important background for the actual situations a girl will encounter. With increased understanding and proficiency, home economics, becomes an art.

Jackie Miller tries her hand at cooking.

"What happens now? I just sewed my finger to the cloth!" Mr. Polkar shares a moment of amusement.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

For some the industrial arts corridor is a refuge from the prosaic classroom lecture. The courses offered give a boy the chance to work with his hands. He may test his skill at woodworking or metal tooling, learn to appreciate the complexity and workmanship inherent in an automobile engine or study the circuitry of a radio. In drafting or mechanical drawing he receives the basics for becoming an architect or engineer. Industrial arts is designed to develop and teach skills and trades. The success of the courses rests strongly on the creative, practical abilities the department strives to discover.

BUSINESS

Possessing the largest Business Department in the district, Euclid is both proud and aware of its efficiency and usefulness. Sponsoring such activities as the Cooperative Office Education and Distributive Education Program, the department infiltrates the city with competent and eager students who obtain well-paying positions in offices and stores. Over one half of the students at Euclid are enrolled in some type of business course either for vocational or personal use. This, plus the realization that all business courses are elective illustrates the popularity and significance of the business world. After successfully struggling through the rigorous business curriculum at Euclid, the student is faced with an assortment of opportunities as numerous and as varied as the rows of business machines he has finally mastered.

ART

Major objectives realized through the study of art include the ability of expression by the individual. Group instruction as well as separate projects aid each student in developing an image of the world around him. One broadens this image through a variety of media. As the student of art experiments with color, line and texture, he comes to comprehend not only his own work, but also that of others. Frequent art shows afford the student the opportunity to bask in satisfaction and occasionally sell his works. Advanced courses include a number of sketching field trips designed to acquaint the serious student with the dynamic subjects he must commit to tangible forms. Art enlarges the student's relation to his environment as its scope approaches a true understanding and appreciation.

MUSIC

The piece of music lay on the slightly slanted stand. After sight-reading the seemingly impossible music, the instrumentalist envisioned the hard work ahead. The sopranos rested as the basses sloughed over the difficult arrangement. The accompanist pounded incessantly. Following these rough first readings, the weeks that followed afforded the serious student the opportunity for practice. In addition to individual and group rehearsals, the music major is fortunate in being able to elect two years of theory. The department strives to develop cooperative spirit both in group enthusiasm and in musical interpretation.

JOURNALISM

Journalism offers a comprehensive study of the newspaper field. The techniques of writing a good editorial, the graphic arts skills, typesetting, layout and printing, become a part of the student's communicative nature. Graduating unto the Survey staff, the pupil practices his newly attained skills. Staff journalism certainly does not cover the range of the journalistic world. Accordingly, second year journalism has as its base, refined writing—newspaper style and creative. Included both years are the fundamentals of composition which form the basis of journalism. Aware of new skills, the student is able to abandon theoretical classroom assignments and communicate more precisely.

"C'mon, Mr. Brown . . . what's news?"

DRAMA

Students in a drama class explore the depths of theater. They carefully examine the themes of various plays and the development of many characters. Emphasis lies on the practical aspects of play production. Individuals create and design sets and costumes. They conduct experiments with the proper application of make-up and work to learn the secrets of effective lighting. Everything absorbed from class discussions and experiences climaxes in a one-act play completely produced and directed by the class. In bits and pieces the theater has evolved in the mind of the student.

DRIVING

Since its introduction driver training has risen in popularity as eager novices desire to learn the art. Preliminary tests given to each enrollee determine his capabilities and measure such things as reaction time and night driving ability. Before any actual driving conditions are encountered, the students discuss the laws and theories of safe driving. Daily review and practice aid each individual in becoming more confident and able. The goal of driver training lies in this end.

ADJUSTED CURRICULUM

Learning practical skills and applying them to everyday living, the Adjusted Curriculum student becomes familiar with areas that will aid him after graduation. The pupil studies standard school courses under the guidance of specially trained teachers. Individual achievement is the goal of the student in this unique program.

READING IMPROVEMENT

Designed for students on all levels of academic ability, Reading Improvement structures and coordinates itself around each individual. A purely optional and voluntary course, only time and effort can determine the student's results. Ultimately a 75% improvement in reading speed ability is gained after unfailing attendance at biweekly appointments in the reading lab. Using such devices as shadow scopes, phase reading films, and the tachiscope, the course not only improves the student's reading speed but also his vocabulary, comprehension, study skills, and concentration.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Face flushed, slightly disheveled, a student enters his class quietly, hoping no one will take notice of his tardiness. He breathes heavily as a result of the strenuous activity that he performed during his physical education class. The complete Euclid program strives to challenge not only the physical but the mental capacity of the student. To an ardent follower of sports, this represents the ideal presentation of the subject, but to many others it symbolizes a required subject that must be taken. Confronted with inadequate facilities and limited area, the department attempts to overcome this handicap and to persuade even the most reluctant student to an active participation.

The physically adroit comprise a unique Euclid society. The athlete develops all aspects of his character during the long seasons. Practice never ceases. It is repeated, spanning seasons and sports. Expected to maintain an "eligible" grade average, he seems to his unathletic cohorts a bit of a walking marvel. All of the practice and fatigue are not in vain. The victories make the hard work worth it all.

VARSITY FOOTBALL

There is no casual observer of football. The football addict avidly follows the fortunes of his team. Spirit expresses itself through overflow crowds and numerous grandstand antics. But the team plays the most important role. Starting with optimism, the squad lost its early season hopes for a victory-filled season. Defeats were numerous. As the record worsened, the fans hoped for a bit of Euclid glory. The team worked and sweated each balmy Friday night. Each touchdown released an incalculable amount of spirit. Finally for Homecoming, victory was obtained. The late season muddy victories illustrated the tremendous determination of the team before shrunken crowds. The record was the official memory, but the staunch and loyal spectator remembers a long, hard season.

The sophomore year provided an opportunity for the football player to become acquainted with the LEL teams. The Junior Varsity team diligently practiced and worked-out, but spectacular crowds failed to materialize to watch the weekly game. Stressing cooperation and fundamentals, the team developed its talents. Although the season wasn't victorious, the gridder learned to fight for Euclid.

Chlorinated, wet and ready, the swimmers faced their opponents with a grim sense of determination. Despite the loss of a majority of their starters, the swim team valiantly fought to maintain their LEL Championship. A surprising number of new names placed themselves on the record book. Old and new mermen, swimming in events they had never planned on, developed new skills and powerful relay teams. Statistics alone do not tell the true story, for many times this season the meet ran down to the wire. Swimmers set many new pool records and battled for the last event stroke for stroke. Developing a nucleus for next year's team, the team placed well in the district meet, successfully completing the season.

VARSITY WRESTLING

Traditionally good, the wrestlers provided another season of victories. Most weight classes were filled by experienced individuals. The talented coaches prepared the wrestlers and perfected their techniques. In several weight classes, new talent was developed following opening shaky starts. These novice members of the team played important roles in later close meets. Casual spectators attempted to follow a match, but the wrestling fans understood the referee's decisions, and usually approved of the Euclid victories. However, the one or two vital meets on the road to LEL championship were lost. A third place finish in the sectionals sent two boys to State. The wrestling team, with great potential, showed the sophisticated methods of Euclid coaching and practice. The team, excellent, perhaps more ready than other teams for all-out victories, did not stimulate a great amount of excitement. The veteran wrestlers were expected to produce a respectable Euclid record standard, and the team did.

JUNIOR VARSITY WRESTLING

Some wrongly consider the term "junior varsity" as something that falls below average; to others, it contains the key to the future, the chance to wrestle "big time" on the varsity squad. Often the J. V. team demonstrates and offers many startling displays of talent from sources that were not previously considered. The coaches, always on the lookout for new talent, search the junior varsity ranks to find replacements for the graduating champions. Junior varsity gives wrestlers a chance to develop and improve skills and techniques that one day they will use when elevated to varsity positions.

The Breakout

CROSS COUNTRY

Probably the least heralded of fall sports, Cross Country attracts more competitors than spectators. With no fans to cheer him on, the harrier depends solely on his long hours of exhausting practice to win. Obscured in the mass of competitors at the starting line, he becomes distinguished as he crosses the finish line. The Cross Country team did not assert its potential until late in the season. At the LEL meet, the team finished third. The strenuous workouts were justified in the season finale as the Panthers notched a respectable place in the standings.

INDOOR TRACK

Designated as a home of champions, the indoor track houses the most successful team in Euclid's history. Panther trackmen have been characterized by a winning tradition. This year the team provided its coach with his one hundredth consecutive home victory. Hardly a spectator sport, track at Euclid draws the few who want to see excellence personified. This year's team broke supposedly unbreakable records. Each victory attested the fact that Euclid trackmen comprise one of the district's most outstanding teams.

TENNIS

Smashing its way through a victorious season, the tennis team captured the first LEL tennis championship ever brought to Euclid. Traditionally good in the spring season, the netters surprised everyone by capturing a well-earned LEL title with ease. The tennis player represents his team during a long and lonely battle. Individuality remains a constant factor during summer practices as team members improvise their own methods. The tennis team provided a fall champion unmatched in excellence.

Panthers on the prowl

VARSITY BASKETBALL

Panther rooters were rarely excited to the pandemonium and anxiety of a close game. Most opponents were methodically eliminated by consistent good play and solid teamwork. Opponents formulated various defenses in an effort to stop the team, but nearly all failed. The Panthers made believers out of hesitant fans and skeptical newspapers. Pep rallies were no longer necessary to excite interest in the team. Capacity crowds packed the gym home or away to watch the Panthers defeat their opponents. The season, tremendous in all respects, ended without the championship victory. Still, basketball proved Euclid spirit and excellence.

JUNIOR VARSITY BASKETBALL

In rising from the obscurity traditionally attributed to any junior varsity sport, this year's basketball Kittens vibrated nearly as much excitement as their varsity counterparts. Sparked by close teamwork, hard practice, enthusiastic spirit, and encouraged by a growing number of spectators, the team survived hard-fought victory after victory, as their efforts were recorded in a near-perfect season.

Girls' sports teams provide a challenge of competition and satisfaction formerly enjoyed by only male contenders. STUDENT COUNCIL

Characterized by dynamic, popular leadership, Student Council attempted to increase representative participation in all areas of student government. In an effort to increase the student's interest in his own affairs, Student Council illustrated that accomplishment and economy could be workable ideas in a large council. The forty minute meetings invariably were too short to adequately discuss major proposals and ideas. Closer relations between the faculty and the students brought Student Council nearer to one of its major goals. Student Council successfully strived for better communications.

FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

The desire to gain insight into the teaching profession motivates students to join F.T.A. Speeches by educators fill a large part of the routine of the meetings. The induction ceremonies in the fall bring members into more personal contact, reducing the disadvantages of the large size of the club. Tutoring fellow students in need of aid enables the student to practice teaching methods. The paraprofessional aspect of teaching, although not highly challenging, becomes the student's through his activities as teacher's aid or hall guard. Exposure to different areas of education aids the club member in plans for the future.

FUTURE NURSES CLUB

From childhood aspirations to working as an aide, future nurses develop their talents and interests. Joining with others that share like interests, they pursue the varied areas connected with the field of medicine. The future nurses begin to realize that only those with a true desire to aid others pass the rigorous and demanding requirements. Banding together under the auspices of a national organization, the hopefuls obtain information on particular fields from authorities, visit various hospitals and aid others however possible. They prepare for the long and difficult road that must be travelled in order to realize childhood dreams.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION CLUB OF AMERICA

A chapter of the national organization, Distributive Education Clubs of America is in its fourth year at Euclid. The goals of the club involve success in salesmanship, managerial posts and other service occupations. D.E.C.A. applicants must survive careful screening for interest and enthusiasm. The annual event of the club, the employer-employee dinner, provides incentive for fund raising activities. D.E.C.A. involves a social relationship between the working student and his employer, preparing him for a solid working knowledge of business and its leaders.

Various projects are performed both individually and as a group as a preparation additional to the classroom. The major goals of the club include practical experience and methods of achieving success.

FRIENDSHIP CLUB

As one of the school's major service organizations, Friendship Club's program has been to execute various projects, centered around needy families and individuals. Establishing a new guide to its activities, the club worked specifically within the City of Euclid. Each holiday took on a special service meaning: for Thanksgiving a canned food collection, hospital favors for Christmas and an Easter party for youngsters. These activities along with the unceasing pleas of "Buy a Panther Pillow," have rewarded the busy schedule kept by Friendship Club with a realization of its true meaning. Through worthwhile projects the club extended its friendship to the community; members contributed care and time to promote its special ideal.

KEY CLUB

Other clubs examine philosophical problems, attend cultural events, or deal exclusively with school problems and affairs. Euclid Key Club, a giant both in service and size in International, combines a wide variety of social events with a number of community and school projects. While the service aspect wins respect, the club's parties generally are considered an integral part of Key Club's program. Alternately sponsoring summer dances and ushering at various programs, Key Club also aids the community. The frequency of parties reflects organization and the dual nature of the club. Besides, Key Club believes in fun.

FOLK CLUB

Entering a world whose vocabulary consists of axes, harps, backrooms and wells, the folk singing enthusiast shares his interest in Folk Club. Importing talent from local coffeehouses to meetings and developing its own representatives of talent, the Folk Club provides a unique opportunity for expressions.

AD CLUB

Ad Club members find themselves running the small, stuffy ticket booths. Mr. Vacc, the club director, prepares his crew well for the challenges and hazards of punching passes and stamping the hands of stampeding masses crowding the gym doors. Through their constant ticket-selling efforts, the Ad Club processed and punched the crowds at all of the athletic events.

LETTERMEN'S CLUB

Members of the Lettermen's Club symbolize a wide interest in sports. Distinguished by the varsity letter, the athletes act as ushers and ticket-takers at various athletic events. They perform the duties as a service to the school and the athletic department. Those with a sense of responsibility and a desire to serve enroll in Lettermen's Club.

PANTHERS

Four exuberant girls enhance the general spirit and excitement of football games. Trying out in a manner similar to that of the cheerleaders, the Panthers are chosen expressly for their performance, spirit and certain "ham" ability. Often helping cheers in the side bleachers, or engaging in some sideline antics, they stand out in their black tailed outfits. Panthers interpret the fierce athletic symbol spiritedly.

SPIRITS

Repeating the sentiment of victory could tend to be a bit tiring. Eager to alleviate repetition, the imaginative, secretive Spirits meets weekly to plan and carry out spirit messages. To bolster excitement following touchdowns, a temperamental "cannon" effectively sounded the score. Charismatic club members followed all sports and provided tangible signs to boost school interest. Havoc to the enemy, good natured, witty posters and evening meetings are the spirited tradition.

CHEERLEADERS

Braving inclement weather and unenthusiastic crowds, the cheerleaders spirit the many voices of the stands into a single vocal demonstration of team loyalty. Disregarding the unfavorable scoreboard and lauding a victorious one becomes an accepted policy of these cheer-instigators. They symbolize the variety of emotions experienced in the sometimes-hushed school spirit.

MAJORETTES

The somber bandsmen backdrop the routine of the Majorettes, which represents near perfection. The huge crowds are unaware of the earlier schedule of strenuous practices. After a weekend is spent composing each routine, early morning practices, which often result in straight hair and chronic colds, become essential during preparation. Unbalanced batons, missed beats and hard work are all culminated and rewarded as the Majorettes perform with the band.

BAND

The numerous opportunities for self-expression found within the bandroom are nearly unlimited. The tremendous equipment allows the musician to experiment, improvise and prepare for performances. The spirited, freewheeling group enjoys a great deal of freedom ordinarily not allowed. In addition to all the splendid factors of this environment, the band also has an understanding director. Of course, excellence is expected of this group. Sometimes the work of learning a new half-time show and appreciating the finer techniques of beret placement are not easy tasks. But the band relents and conforms. Concert season breaks up the marchers into two separate entities, the Cadet and Concert Bands. Chevron society members are proficient musicians who merit the chevron for their uniforms. And all instrumentalists must endure tryouts and sight-reading impossible music. No other organization expects and receives so much from its participants.

ORCHESTRA

At least once in his life, everyone dreams of being proficient in one special instrument. Would-be greats easily become discouraged once they discover the number of hours of practice it takes to become proficient. Even those who remain devoted throughout the transition years of junior high school often find the exacting life of high school too demanding to accommodate both music and studies. In most cases, the academic requirements take precedence while the music is left to gather dust. Only those who possess a dedication to music share the responsibility to maintain the high standing and quality of the orchestra.

CHOIRS

Practice and repetition are two basic methods of learning notes. Only after each choral member is sure of the proper notes can expression become part of a song. This feeling, which comes with the student's interest and enthusiasm, brings music to an audience. Two capable and energetic directors combine the choirs' numerous notes and enthusiasm to produce one dynamic sound.

VARSITY CHORALE

Chosen for their special enthusiasm and voice quality, the twenty-six Varsity Chorale members did not take their vocal responsibilities lightly. The small group achieved a blending and flexibility of sound rarely encountered in high school ensembles. Intensive struggles with notes and rhythm enabled Varsity to accomplish its unity and exact harmony. Often Mr. Taylor's individual browbeating raised a good voice to excellence. The privilege of wearing a blue jacket singularly belonged to the Varsity Chorale.

CHORAL MASTERS

From the initial challenge of a new song until its final presentation on stage, the Masters strive for perfection. Early doubts and occasional sour notes are corrected while being rehearsed again and again. Misplaced music is a result of last-minute memorization. Gradually, some ninety voices become one as tones blend and mellow to produce the Choral Masters' sound.

WAI NAPOLO

From the time she learns the meaning of Wai Napolo until her honored position as judge of prospective inductees, the swim club member shares her pride in aquatic skill with thirty-six sister enthusiasts. Combining skill and imagination with many water-logged hours in January, aspirations of the club center around its annual spring show. A swim leader combines her skill and imagination in teaching both the interested and apathetic pupils. Called upon to utilize many diversified talents, a swim leader must possess patience, poise, and skill. Armed with her attributes, she instructs sleekly swims and perpetuates her mermaid legend on Tuesday nights.

SKI CLUB

Brightly colored jackets and patterned sweaters lay waiting to be donned by would-be skiers. The enthusiastic owners began following weather reports early in November. Hopes were realized in the first weeks of December when snow squalls provided the necessary base. Ski "buffs" gathered equipment for a Saturday of practice and frostbite on the slopes of Mont Chalet. December faded into a dry, snowless end and took with it the brief period of joy for the club. Members again took up their ritual "snow watch" and in early February the serious skiers once more made it to the slopes.

GIRLS' LEADERS CLUB

The shriek of her whistle and the shouted call of "Lineup" sound the beginning of the Girls' Leader's responsibilities. She duly dispenses marks to the gum-chewers and jewelry-wearers, leads exercises, and reffs GAA games. Not only does she further her leadership potential, but she also develops lasting friendships which are renewed at the annual Christmas party. The enthusiasm with which the Girls' Leader aids the teacher and participants in class activities wins for her the respect of her classmates.

GIRLS ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Offering a large variety of sports throughout the year, the Girls' Athletic Association establishes a type of intramurals program. Volleyball, badminton, and basketball give girls their only chance to improve skills and physical dexterity. Open to all three grade levels, the club sponsors events of a social nature, such as co-ed volleyball games, hayrides, and parties. A large club, GAA proves the importance of both femininity and fitness.

CAMERA CLUB

The subject's answer to the Camera Club member's unexpected attack borders on both pleasure and exasperation. With flashes of light and clicks of the shutters, the camera fiend maliciously retreats to the sanctity of the dark room. The film is unloaded with eager anticipation for the results of the day's hunt. The fresh print remains the photographer's reward as he develops techniques and cares for equipment. Each role of film improves with practice, while candid poses must be imaginatively and inconspicuously captured.

MOVIE CLUB

A movie excites an otherwise pathetic classroom group. Conversation centers on the movie that will be shown to provide a respite from note-taking. Soon echoing down the hall, comes the thunder of the projector guided by a member of the movie club. One qualified to join the club executes various tasks. Attempting to provide enjoyable entertainment, the noon movie and its low price offers an easy escape into the celluloid world.

FOREMAN'S CLUB

Keeping an eye out for twenty students running an equal number of potentially hazardous machines seems all but impossible. Designed to partially alleviate the teacher of this burden, skilled and responsible students are eligible for membership in Foreman's Club. The boys also must have the respect of their fellow students. Only a select few are privileged as foremen to aid the instructor in the maintenance of class safety and supervision.

STAGE CREW

Stage Crew demands boys who work hard, long hours with sets, backdrops, lights and other effects. This work requires a certain dedication coupled with patience and perseverance. Aside from the nights spent on the various dramatic productions, duties of Stage Crew include the many after-school, evening and Saturday work sessions. The responsibilities accepted by the Stage Crew make possible many successful productions.

P. A. CLUB

The microphone mysteriously appears and disappears on a stage, prior to and following assemblies. This operation isn't really mysterious at all. Members of P. A. Club set-up, adjust and care for microphones, cords and other necessary equipment. Without P. A. workers, the suave speakers would be forced to shout. P. A. allows valuable speeches to be audible.

STUDENT STORE

If a student can fight his way through the throng in the Student Store, he will find a large variety of items to purchase. By holding a monopoly on the school supply and cough drop business, the Student Store packs its cramped quarters every day between periods. The store contains a large library of paperback books for both leisure and required readings, plus supplies necessary for a student's needs. Despite the size and frequently overcrowded conditions, the store's success stems from the fact that it enjoys a singular monopoly.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

National Honor Society inductees display an interest in activities, possess stolid characters, exhibit a certain degree of scholastic proficiency and capably lead cohorts in many areas. The more material manifestations of honor are the ceremonial induction and the shiny pins. During the assembly, the audience listens to the names being called with envy and a touch of admiration. The inductee respects and appreciates the honor of recognition.

NATIONAL FORENSIC LEAGUE

Building eloquent argumentation, distinct enunciation and destroying undue nervousness, National Forensic League participates in a full schedule of events. Reserving Saturdays for tournaments, the orators prepare their speeches from a number of categories, ranging from Dramatic Declamation to Extemporaneous Speaking. Requiring a certain number of points to become an official member, the NFL participant earns points at tournament attendance and perhaps, if an eloquent enough speaker, a trophy.

AMERICAN FIELD SERVICE

Cosmopolitan in outlook, the A.F.S. student member acts as a welcoming, hard working, ticket-selling friend of the foreign exchange student. Norway's Randi Svendsen made all of the club's efforts more than worthwhile. The informative assemblies and results of the group's creativity bring a bit of another world to Euclid.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS

Members of the Political Affairs Club started out the year with an intense drive for new faces to bolster their ranks. When fledgling members were finally assembled, a speaker was engaged to discuss current governmental problems. Although small in number, this group examined affairs of a political nature.

WORLD AFFAIRS

Improved methods of communication among nations and a faster paced world has created a new awareness of world affairs. The members of the World Affairs Club discuss various methods to appreciate this communication. A mock United Nations with different schools representing various countries culminates the activities and tests the true comprehension of what has been gained during the course of the year.

EUCUYO

With the aim of expanding the contents of the only unadulterated literary magazine, the staff of Eucuyo undauntedly accomplished its search for materials. Foreign language poetry, increased illustrations and a wider variety of contributing writers provided more interesting reading for the various editors and, naturally, the subscribers. Without an office for meetings and work, staffers read, criticized and planned in unexciting classrooms. However unexciting the surroundings, the personality of Eucuyo reflects itself both in its expanded publication and in the many talented staff-writers and poets in residence.

SCIENCE SEMINAR

Evening meetings bring out the very best or very worst of a club's speakers. The engineers, doctors and professors that Science Seminar presented at the weekly Tuesday night gatherings lectured on numerous topics. Qualified by displaying proficiency on an exam, the member attended both the good and bad presentations methodically. The scientist personified his field. His abilities and interest likewise led to inspiration and a glance at actual professional scientific problems.

SPECTRUM

Unlike other school activities, Spectrum is not based around one interest. The unusual feature of this club involves the desire of members to have some interesting activity. With funds raised partially through a car wash, the group attended a variety of events, including the Ice Capades and the Vienna Boys Choir. The merging of the different interests of members produced a varied list of Spectrum activities.

SURVEY BUSINESS

Somewhat overshadowed by the Editorial Staff's aggressive office policies, the Business Staff of Survey asserted its excellence. The subscription drive illustrated the persuasive powers of the staffers, as well as the high degree of organization; a record number of subscribers received the bi-weekly Survey. Friday nights were spent with football or basketball program assembling and selling. Ad solicitation kept the price of the paper down. The ample funds provided by the Business Staff gave the Editorial room for experimentation. Success didn't slow down the harried, promising supersalesmen of Survey.

SURVEY EDITORIAL

A biweekly publication, Survey is the distinguished lion of Euclid's publications. The frequent deadlines met by a few hardy editors provided a popular journalistic review of events past and future. The long list of awards and achievements Survey annually totals attest to the quality of the staff and writers. The excellent paper, biweekly-produced, biweekly-read, and biweekly-criticized is not the entire Survey organization. Aside from the work routine, Survey displays its remarkable talent for doing just about everything in a grand style. The freewheeling staff experiments with paper airplanes and enjoys various parties. Survey works. But without the Survey style, the office would merely house unspirited staffers.

"So what if it isn't chocolate?"

Future editors make a wish.

INTERNATIONAL QUILL AND SCROLL

After a hectic year of frantic midnight typing in order to get material out on time, students and advisors pause to honor those people whose outstanding work merits recognition. The E-Room becomes the scene of an induction ceremony as staff members of Eucuyo, Survey, and Euclidian are initiated into International Quill and Scroll. At the reception that follows, members of these publications have the opportunity to relax and discuss their mutual journalistic problems and interests.

Editor Cecily Hunt awards honors at annual Induction Ceremony.

Advisors Mrs. Folsel, Mr. Dickinson.

EUCLIDIAN BUSINESS

Although many persons try to escape the realities of the world, the everpresent business factors always press and eventually bring all under their potent power. The Editorial Staff enjoyed conceiving a yearbook, but without the industrious labor of its business counterpart, the book might never have been brought into actuality. The Euclidian Business Staff constantly worked toward its goal of paying for the production of the book by persuasively selling ads, gaining patrons and enticing students to purchase a yearbook through a clever and creative campaign. Regardless of little recognition, the Business Staff continually performed its work of financing a book and then, proudly, distributing the result.

Incessant work hardly reflects the total Euclid way of life. Breaking the monotony of labor, activities afford the weary a bit of fun. With a smile the student can recall that the activity provided a good time.

HOMECOMING

Surrounded by "Beat Heights" posters, students frantically finished up the usual stack of work left for the last week of the grading period. Excellent weather aided spirit at the Thursday night bonfire. The victory bell triumphantly greeted the team as Euclid inched to its first victory of the season. Enthusiasm culminated in the E-Room and ended only with the last flutter of Autumn Leaves.

PLAYS

A telescreen supplemented by the Thought Police created the totalitarian society of Big Brother. In the world of 1984 contradiction is truth, love is hate, and individuality an unforgivable error. Winston and Julia were victims and products of the utilitarian dogma of the Party. Adapted from George Orwell's prophetic novel, the fall cast delivered a highly dramatic presentation.

Gentlemen Prefer Blondes complimented the seriousness of the fall play. On their way to Europe, Lorelei and Dorothy engendered a series of comical mishaps. The play ended with ironic happiness and the audience left wondering which they actually do prefer.

WINTER FESTIVAL

Wandering about the decorated halls and classrooms, students came upon carnival booths which tried to capture everyone's attention. An auction, a three-legged race, and a fortune teller satisfied the various whims of those present. Food, and couples holding hands were found in the corridors. Three weeks separated the Winter Sports carnival dance. On the night of the dance, couples entered the E-Room through an arch of blue flowers. There, amid blue crepe paper and balloons, they danced till midnight sounded and ended the evening of Midnight Blues.

E ROOM

Daily the E-Room houses both academic and social events. Team-teaching classes convene in the ballroom. After school and during lunch periods the center provides music and conversation, breaking the day for the weary student. Respectful use has kept the complex of rooms in good condition. Mrs. Martinsen supervises and coordinates the activities. The E-Room's versatile character permits Euclid's students to hear a lecture on tragedy in the ballroom in the morning and dance in the same room that night.

What ever happened to the Class of '67?

Someday you'll be asking yourself this question as you look through this yearbook. Don't be surprised if the faces of those classmates you still know look a little older. The girl who used to sit next to you in English may then be a wife and mother who worries more about raising her children than about J. D. Salinger. Your close friend who shared many a double date and problem with you might very well be only a name on a yearly Christmas card.

Life changes at graduation time. Most important of all, you and the other members of your class cease to be a well-defined group and begin to act as individuals.

It's you, the individual, that interests us both now and in the future. In return, we'd like you to think of us not just as a company that happens to have its General Offices and Corporate Headquarters in your home town, but as a company that offers you an opportunity to succeed as an individual.

What ever happened to the class of '67? Frankly, we're not too concerned. We'd rather talk about what's going to happen to you, a member of that class. If you'd like to talk to us about your future with Reliance, now or after you've had additional education or after the armed forces, peace corps, or another job, just give our Personnel Director a call at 732-7000.

BEARING THESE FAMILIAR TRADEMARKS

Go to Market in Many Ways

The diversity of Eaton Yale & Towne's domestic and worldwide distribution methods fully matches the diversity of its product lines and the customers it serves. Thus, the company has had to become expert in the best ways to move things . . . through virtually every known channel of distribution. And — all along the line as its parts and products move to market — Eaton Yale & Towne makes the serving every bit as important as the selling.

Beginning in June with ambitions to produce a supplement, paint an office, make extensive plans and publish Euclid's best book, my staff and I have finished with only enough energy to say "It's done." The year has been a full one for us and for those who have helped to make Euclidian possible.

Thanks are due to the people at Raimor Studios for their technical assistance, their understanding, and their prompt service during occasional catastrophes. Mr. Jim Parkinson, our representative from Consolidated Graphic Arts, has been a great consultant and adviser, and has often renewed our enthusiasm with his words of encouragement. The efforts of Mr. Dickinson, Mrs. Foisel, and the Business Staff have given the book financial impetus, and I hope that our product will be reward enough for their work. Special thanks go to Mrs. Spott and Mr. Henderson, who had much to contend with as first-year Euclidian sponsors. Keys, office course, copy checks, public relations and our staff have involved them in the demanding Euclidian world.

The book itself could never have been realized without the efforts of my staff. While competing in championship play-offs for Chinese jump-rope, mimicking an often-used "What's the condition?" or participating in tenth period hall-guard evading and balcony bull-sessions, they still managed to supply me with the lay-outs, copy, IDs and photos that are Euclidian. Tested by the tedious hours of deadline preparation and decision-making meetings, inter-staff friendships ended in admiration or animosity. May this, Euclidian 1967, make your efforts seem worthwhile.
